The College World Reporter Announces New Race Relations Program

Little Rock, AR - July 6, 2010 - It is very sad but true that race is still one of the most serious problems in our society, and it is a world problem, it is not just limited to the United States. It is for this reason that a major part of our mission at The College World Reporter(CWR) is to promote racial harmony and ethnic and gender appreciation. As part of that mission, in 2009 we featured special issues celebrating Black History Month, Women's History Month, Asian Pacific American Heritage Month, and Hispanic Heritage Month.

To further our mission to promote diversity and racial harmony, we are implementing a new program that will feature a multicultural team of writers consisting of Asian Pacific American (s), Arab American(s), Latino(s), African American(s), Native American(s), and Caucasian(s) with extensive knowledge about their culture, people, and history. This is based on the concept for the cable TV program that we created in 2000, The MultiCultural Zone. An overview for that program may be accessed at the link below:

It is our hope to reach a new generation of late teens, college and university students, and young adults, and empower them with the knowledge to build inter-cultural relationships, and to learn not only to respect other cultures, but to appreciate the many benefits of cultural, ethnic, and gender diversity.

The role of these writers will be to write monthly articles for The CWR to educate our readers about their culture and history, to comment on current events and national and world affairs from the vantage point of their particular ethnic group, to correct and help eradicate stereotypes and misconceptions other people may have about their ethnic group, and to express their views of race relations in general in the United States, and how to improve race relations among the various racial and ethnic groups in America.

This is a voluntary position and the ideal candidate will have a real passion for teaching and sharing his or her knowledge about that individual's culture and people.

We have been very, very fortunate to attract several members already, but we still need representation from the Asian Pacific American community. If you are interested, or you know someone who meets the qualifications that may have an interest, please contact The College World Reporter at TheCWR@CWRMagOnline.com, or call (501) 952-2699.

This project is one of the most important projects The College World Reporter has ever undertaken, and we hope to find the right person or persons to complete our team.
